Dear Parents and Students,

Re: Extended Project Qualification (EPQ)

What is EPQ?

EPQ is a standalone qualification worth half of an A level. It is taken as an independent research project and students are responsible for ensuring that they are making progress with their work. Each student selects the topic to be researched from an area of personal interest outside of their main field of study and as such the range of EPQ titles is extraordinarily diverse. The EPQ itself is a research project that results in a report in excess of 5000 words. It comprises three assessed elements: a production log, the project itself and a formal presentation.

Why take EPQ?

It is a widely recognised qualification and is worth up to 28 UCAS points. Since A level reform the qualification is growing hugely in popularity; it provides a competitive edge for Sixth Form students leaving school to enter a competitive marketplace. All universities (and this includes those in the Russell Group) as well as an increasing number of employers view the project in a positive light for a number of reasons:

- It is student driven and demonstrates initiative and independence
- It develops key skills:
 - Research & Referencing
 - Time management
 - ICT and project management
 - Critical analysis
 - Presenting
- Good EPQ projects require the ability to research and synthesise ideas
- Projects take students beyond the confines of subjects and deepens their understanding

How is it delivered and how is progress monitored?

The course is very much a student-driven endeavour with some taught elements. Students attend EPQ sessions during Health and Wellbeing in the library on a Wednesday afternoon. During these sessions the development of students' projects is monitored and guidance is given. Students are also allocated an individual mentor who is there to assist and offer further guidance and expertise as required. This will take the form of another member of staff from the school.

Because of the independent nature of the EPQ it is important that students take responsibility for keeping on track with their projects although detailed feedback specific to the mark scheme will be given following the pre-submission draft of the project. There is a specific piece of software called Project Q that is used to support students with this.

Acceptance onto the course

In our experience, it is the most highly motivated and independent students who get the most out of EPQ. Furthermore, those with higher prior attainment often fare better with the demands of the course. Undertaking an EPQ is not to be entered lightly: It is not easy – 'it wouldn't be worth doing if it was' - but it is certainly manageable and rewarding! It is good for students who are self-motivated, who like to be challenged, who are organised and who are inquisitive. We ask that all students who wish to participate in the qualification submit a short letter of application (around 150-200 words) detailing why they would like to undertake the EPQ.

Places are limited and there is a cost of £250 attached to the course, payable in three instalments. It is an extra course that we offer and as such is not included in normal teaching hours. There is financial support available for any student who finds themselves in genuine financial hardship. Please come and speak to one of the sixth form team to discuss this further.

If your child wishes to participate in the qualification, please complete the return slip overleaf with both your signature and that of your son or daughter; confirming you are happy with the commitment that they are undertaking.

The deadline date for the return of the slip is 18th September.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any queries concerning the course.

Yours sincerely,

Mr C L Foley
